This high-powered panel looks at logistics in, to and from Western Canada. Learn how it’s evolving and how organizations across Canada can capitalize on this economic powerhouse.

Thursday, October 23 • 8:30 am - 10:00 am

Evolving trade patterns resulting from the great influx of Asian imports, combined with growing demand for Canadian energy, raw materials and food products mean logistics in Western Canada is facing unprecedented change. There’s increased pressure on infrastructure and capacity, and transportation rates are on the rise. These are changes that will affect SCL operations across Canada and internationally.

But that doesn’t mean there aren’t opportunities and advantages among the challenges. Reasons more organizations are keeping an eye on the west include:

- Transportation and logistics accounted for $4.79 billion in GDP in Calgary alone
- Canada’s strongest economic growth is happening in the west
- Western Canada’s growth has national and international impact regardless if you do business there

In understanding the west, SCL strategies must account for the critical reality that Western Canada is distinct from the rest of the country—and requires a distinct approach. Looking at Western Canada from all perspectives, this panel includes an economist, a shipper, road and rail carriers, and more.

After attending this session delegates will know how to:

- Understand how the challenges and opportunities in Western Canada affect the entire Canadian supply chain and beyond
- Implement strategies to deal with heavily trafficked, single-lane highways that dominate most of Western Canada, which can result in logistical nightmares in event of accidents and closures
- Cope with the harsh weather patterns, which essentially create winter driving conditions for five months of the year, affecting road and rail transportation
- Deal with the capacity problems due to network imbalance caused by thin population density that can compromise utilization of equipment
- Keep transportation costs in check in the face of rising demand for transportation services coupled with concerns about capacity and infrastructure

Moderator: Lou Smyrlis, Editorial Director, Transportation Media Properties, Business Information Group

Find out what a transportation control tower is and how top organizations use the data they collect to build supply chain maturity that increases visibility and decreases costs

Thursday, October 23 • 10:30 am - 12:00 pm

There’s an increasing abundance of data, metrics, and tracking available to supply chain logistics decision-makers. The sector is in need of better ways to aggregate that data and make sense of it, and technology is that solution. That’s why top tier organizations have been early adopters of multi-party, cloud-based TMS solutions, commonly known as transportation control towers. But a control tower can be complex, so there’s also the need to optimize them—because incorrectly implementing a control tower can cost capital and ROI that isn’t fully realized.

This session will cover how to effectively implement a transportation control tower by embracing technology, improving visibility, reducing resource costs and the overall transportation network costs. The benefits of control tower capabilities are impressive, with a substantial saving in time-to-problem-resolution of 46%, and cash-to-cash cycle of 7 days, equating to a 12.7% reduction in deployed cash. Even if your business sees best-in-class SCL operations as a distant possibility, a control tower will help you characterize how an end-to-end holistic view of your supply chain would operate—and how you can get there.

After this session, delegates will understand the fundamentals of transportation control towers and how to use them to improve:

- Shipment optimization
- Visibility to shipment status
- Shipment execution to reduce freight costs
- The accuracy of freight budgets

Speakers: Ryan Bloor, CCLP, PMP, is a sector veteran who has been implementing transportation control towers for 8 years, with 21 years of industry experience. Ryan has worked in logistics project management, including optimizing warehousing and receiving and shipping operations. He also has experience as a trade compliance manager and 8 years in various leadership roles.

Oliver Heath, CCLP, P.Log, has been with Celestica for 22 years. Before his current role on the logistics services team, he worked for 8 years on the logistics process team, where he developed and supported a large range of operations. Oliver has also worked in educating the sector, developing training packages and delivering operations training. Oliver is a Sigma Six Green Belt and a certified Project Management Professional.

Discover your emotional intelligence and leadership style—and how to improve it to build motivation, loyalty and creativity—in this interactive workshop

Thursday, October 23 • 1:15 pm - 4:00 pm

Leadership is the core of great businesses. But HR research has found that the supply chain logistics sector is facing an impending shortage of senior talent and leaders as boomers retire and young workers aren’t coming in quickly enough to replace them. From mentorship to retention, excellent leadership is invaluable to any organization. In fact, analysts place up to an additional 20% value on businesses with strong leadership.

This in-depth session will explore the five areas of leadership—self perception, stress management, self expression, decision making, and interpersonal abilities—and includes a self-assessment exercise in which attendees will discover their own leadership style and skills, as well as how to improve them.

Delegates will learn how to become stronger leaders and build relationships that directly lead to increased profitability, strong brand/reputation, a high performance corporate culture, and better talent/HR outcomes (like attracting, retaining and motivating top-tier talent). Participants will gain leadership knowledge that can be immediately implemented at work, in better team management or simply leading by taking individual initiative. Whether you directly manage people or are part of a team, your leadership skills can have a big impact on your company’s success.

After attending this 3-hour session & workshop, delegates will be able to:

• Understand their leadership EQ, and how to build the related core skills
• Identify the most sought-after leadership skills and how to demonstrate them
• Improve retention & team loyalty through emotionally intelligent leadership
• Identify the key skill which is the most likely predictor of leadership potential

Speaker: Fiorella Callocchia is President of HR Impact, a consulting firm specializing in leadership and management development. She is a sought-after speaker who brings over 30 years of experience consulting and coaching senior leaders across every sector. Fiorella has worked at Deloitte’s Human Capital Practice, the largest and top-recognized consulting firm in the world. She’s an accredited facilitator on numerous leadership and team assessment tools, including Emotional Intelligence. Fiorella is also the author of Canada’s first HR Audit Toolkit, a business best-seller, and has been featured in the Globe and Mail, Toronto Star, the Financial Post, and more.
Go beyond the buzz and find out how analyzing key data can help you develop best-in-class supply chain performance and make your company more profitable

Friday, October 24 • 8:30 am - 10:00 am

With so much available to businesses, the challenge isn’t so much what you know anymore—it’s determining what’s important and being able to use it to make smart decisions. Big data is big. But it doesn’t have to be overwhelming. And it can help you develop the best-in-class supply chain operations that result in averages of 25% higher annuals sales growth than businesses with inferior operations.

Between increasing regulation and complexity and the new norm of volatile demand, it’s no secret that supply chain logistics is becoming more complicated all the time. And as technology advances, we’re able to collect data about nearly everything in supply chain operations, meaning we can make informed decisions—if we know what to look at, and how to look for it in the information we have. That’s being smart with Big data.

Big data is a technology term used to describe the massive, and increasing, amounts of data that can be captured and used to help businesses make decisions. Applied to supply chain logistics, big data brings information from all points of the supply chain together to provide insights into adapting to a business environment that’s only getting more complex. This session will analyze many case studies and examples to show how big data solutions have significantly benefitted companies across a wide range of industries to noticeably boost their bottom lines.

Delegates will leave with:
• A new understanding of big data and how it applies to SCL operations
• Insight into big data best practices and how big data can prepare SCL operations for the unexpected
• Applicable, real-world examples of how big data has been used to enhance and optimize SCL operations and corporate profitability

Speaker: Martin Mysyk has a business person’s brain and a technology heart. He is a Product Solution Specialist with Microsoft who has helped many organizations discover new strategies that streamline their operations to make them leaner and more profitable. Martin currently deals with end users in the areas of Big Data and business intelligence. Martin’s business and technology background give him sought-after insight on Big Data and the impact it can have in organizations as they look to optimize cost, be more agile, and create new value out of existing resources.
Pipeline Logistics

Get insight into the operational challenges of crude pipelines, the transportation mode at the heart of the Canadian energy industry’s financial growth, and what your business can learn from it

Friday, October 24 • 10:30 am - 11:00 am

There isn’t a logistics operation in Canada that isn’t affected in some way by the pipelines that carry crude oil across the country and into the United States. Yet not many logistics professionals outside of the pipelines fully understand the role pipelines play in the energy supply chain, let alone the logistical complexities that arise from being a highly regulated common carrier with strained network capacity.

This session will give delegates an understanding of how the North American and global crude oil supply and demand fundamentals drive Enbridge Pipelines into developing long-term transportation options that enable the efficient flow of crude oil from supply regions to end-user markets. This perspective will come from the perspective of Enbridge’s Customer Service group – an organization responsible for the logistics planning, shipment management and transport accounting for the 2.5 million barrels they move through their system every day.

After attending this session, delegates will have first-hand insight into how:
• Pipeline carriers deal with governmental regulation and external stakeholder interests
• Industry is adapting to supply profiles that far exceed current pipeline capacities
• A common carrier balances individual client needs and expectations with the health of the overall system
• To optimize existing infrastructure when there is a high cost and complexity to asset expansion

Speaker: David Bryson has been with Enbridge for 20 years, where he has worked as a project engineer for Enbridge Gas Distribution, VP of Major Projects, VP of Strategy and Integrated Services, and VP of Customer Service, Liquids Pipelines – the role he holds now. In this position, David leads departments responsible for Infrastructure Planning; Network Logistics and Service Delivery; Special Optimization Projects and more. David also has significant experience in risk management and compliance, R&D, and supply chain management. David has a Mechanical Engineering Degree from the University of Western Ontario.

Learn how to make a REAL difference to your workplace’s culture by creating an inspiring workplace for healthier, more engaged and more productive employees

Friday, October 24 • 11:15 am - 12:30 pm

Workplace culture is a big topic of discussion in business and management circles. But too often, it’s just talk about culture, not actually taking steps to make their workplaces, fun, inspiring environments. Even though 90% of managers say culture is more important than strategy to business success—affecting everything from turnover to innovation—many of them don’t know how to foster a good workplace culture. It’s especially important in the supply chain logistics field, where growing talent shortages encourage poaching and short tenures, making the kind of loyalty a good culture develops invaluable.

This session, hosted by Michael Kerr, a leading authority on creating inspirational workplace environments, will show delegates applicable and practical ways to inspire their workplaces and create a more positive culture.

After attending this session, delegates will be able to:
• Immediately apply principles of creating healthier, inspiring workplaces
• Articulate an inspiring vision of both projects and a business as a whole
• Create inspiring service for fellow employees or customers
• Speak in a way that inspires constant and open communication in the workplace
• Inspire employees with the top motivating influences in any workplace
• Understand the importance of celebrating, recognizing and rewarding work

Speaker: Michael Kerr is known as one of North America’s leading authorities on how to create more inspiring workplace environments. His company, Humor at Work, has helped hundreds of clients from around the world create more positive and productive workplaces. His books include Putting Humour to Work and Inspiring Workplaces – Creating the Kind of Workplace Where EVERYONE Wants to Work!

CP Facility Tour (facility to be confirmed)

While in Calgary, Canada Pacific (CP)’s headquarters, take a tour of a CP facility that is helping provide freight transportation services, logistics solutions and supply chain expertise to their customers.

CP is a transcontinental railway in Canada and the United States with direct links to eight major ports, including Vancouver and Montreal, providing North American customers a competitive rail service with access to key markets in every corner of the globe.

For updated information on this tour, visit www.citt.ca/conference

Sobeys Calgary RSC

The Sobeys Calgary Retail Support Centre (RSC) is a multi-temperature facility and over 200K square feet in size. In this educational and informative tour you will see firsthand the storage and handling of various food products and learn how the Calgary RSC is integrated with its counterparts in Edmonton and Winnipeg to efficiently service their stores.

Sobeys Inc. is one of only two national grocery retailers in Canada. Sobeys serves the food shopping needs of Canadians with more than 1,500 stores in all 10 provinces under the retail banners that include Sobeys, Safeway, IGA, Foodland, FreshCo, Price Chopper, Thrifty Foods and Lawtons Drugs. In Western Canada, Sobeys serves the region Alberta to Manitoba from three key RSCs.
Praise for Past Conferences

Canada Logistics Conference delivers actionable, high-level learning relevant to anyone who buys, sells or manages the flow of goods and materials, or who is impacted by supply chain logistics

- Last year, over 90% of delegates rated their experience from “Good” to “Excellent”. More than 40% of this group were attending this annual event for the first time.
- Over 90% of surveyed delegates reported that they took away practical, actionable ideas and strategies that could be immediately applied to their role or business.

“Thank you for a perfectly organized conference! The content & presenters were outstanding. I’ll be using the recordings, presentations and supporting materials to prepare a formal report with recommendations for senior management at my company.”

2013 Conference Delegate

“The learning session content was excellent and very relevant, and the interactive sessions were an excellent opportunity to interact with other delegates. The caliber and quality of delegates in attendance is excellent, and speaks to the importance of the conference itself.”

2013 Conference Delegate

“I have over 30 years of attending various conferences, seminars, and workshops and this was by far the best organized one yet. Kudos to CIT for putting on a well-rounded event that included ethics, communication, and other business topics as well as logistics-specific industry topics.”

Opening Reception at the Canadian Pacific Railway Pavilion

Royal Canadian Pacific
201-9th Ave SW, Calgary

Wednesday, October 22 • 7:30 pm - 10:00 pm

Kick off your conference experience by meeting and networking with about 200 of your fellow supply chain and logistics professionals. The conference opening reception will be held at the Royal Canadian Pacific Railway Pavilion, and will bring together conference delegates from across the country as well as members of the Calgary supply chain and logistics industry. The CPR Pavilion is located in downtown Calgary and is connected to The Fairmont Palliser (this year’s Canada Logistics Conference venue).

For those attending the full conference, attendance at this event is part of your full conference registration. Additional tickets are available so you can treat your clients or reward top performers with a night of valuable networking. For one-day conference attendees or those unable to attend the daytime program, individual tickets are available.

TICKETS

Delegates attending the full conference: Free (included in your registration)

CITT members and CITT students: $75 (plus 5% GST)

Guests/non-members: $95 (plus 5% GST)

“As a new person involved in logistics, I appreciated the openness and professionalism of your delegates. They all, with rare exception, passed me a business card and extended the offer of ongoing support after the conference where there is little or nothing for them to gain personally from it. A very welcoming group of individuals.”

Canada Logistics Conference 2014 will attract current and future senior-level decision makers from across the country who will gather in the business and financial centre of Western Canada to learn about the burning issues impacting businesses, supply chains and logistics operations—and to network with the supply chain community of shippers, carriers and providers of ancillary services.

If professionals working on either the shipper or carrier side of supply chain logistics are your customers, participating as a sponsor is a great way to get in front of them while also aligning your brand with another strong, trusted brand: CITT—industry’s most valued and respected source of logistics courses, professional certification and expertise.

Several major sponsorship packages that come with deep promotional exposure are available, including:

✓ Canada Logistics Conference 2014 Premier Sponsor
✓ 2014 Virtual Conference Sessions sponsor
✓ The individual, live learning sessions outlined in this booklet
✓ Gala dinner entertainment, cocktail reception and the gala dinner menu & awards program
✓ Hotel room internet for delegates staying in the CITT room block
✓ The delegate list, a networking break, shipping, and more!

Exhibitor space is also available, and there are several advertising opportunities—there’s something for every marketing budget. If you’re interested in a sponsorship package, exhibitor booth or ad placement, please contact us as soon as possible.
